Associate

Marc-André Bouchard is a member of the Litigation group. He acts mainly as a litigator in civil and commercial cases before the Quebec courts, particularly for a number of clients in the construction industry, as well as in commercial and contract insurance and professional liability cases.

He focuses on litigation and dispute resolution for professionals, contractors, and insurers in the construction and infrastructure sector.

Marc-André Bouchard has had the opportunity to collaborate in cases involving large-scale trials requiring complex evidence management and large amounts of documents.

He has also developed expertise in the analysis of blueprints and specifications and has a good understanding of the environment surrounding this industry. He is regularly asked to collaborate on complex issues involving numerous technical details and a range of challenges.

As part of these mandates, Mr. Bouchard is called upon to give legal opinions on various issues and to guide and represent clients throughout negotiations.

Mr. Bouchard distinguishes himself by his ability to make technical terms accessible and always ensures that his legal advice takes financial factors and other risks that may affect the mandates into consideration. In the context of disputes between parties, Mr. Bouchard always analyzes alternative dispute resolution methods in a manner that benefits the represented client.

Marc-André joined the Lavery team as a student in May 2016, after which he completed his articling with the firm.
