

Frédéric Laflamme

Partner

Frédéric Laflamme is a member of the firm's Litigation and Dispute Resolution group. His practice is focused on matters involving civil and commercial litigation, such as civil liability, construction law and shareholder disputes. He is called upon to represent Canadian and foreign companies, insurers, manufacturers, contractors and shareholders before Quebec's superior courts, and to advise them on settling their disputes.

Prior to joining the firm, he practiced law in the Montréal office of a major pan-Canadian law firm before completing graduate studies in journalism in France. He was a host at ICI Radio-Canada Première for ten years in the Mauricie and Centre-du-Québec regions in particular, in addition to collaborating on numerous national radio shows.

In 2000, Mr. Laflamme was part of the winning team of the Laskin moot court competition in Canadian administrative and constitutional law.
